farmland and water investments.

Kilter Rural delivers investors new and expanding opportunities for superior long-term returns from these alternative asset classes.

They have been pivotal in supporting major developments including southern cotton growing, subterranean irrigation expansion, water use efficiencies and water security and supporting growers to meet developing market demands.

Hazeldene's is the largest private employer in Bendigo, employing more than 700 locals directly as well as contracting more than 400 experts within our business in specialised roles. They are active drawing from the value-chain within the region and seek to develop their agribusiness further.

ScatoPlus are producers of Quality mushroom growing compost, with a range of compost products suitable for medium and large scale mushroom growing operations.

Located nearby the central Victorian town of Newbridge, 25min from Bendigo, they offer Australian wide delivery for Phase 2 and Phase 3 compost. This is a very innovative agribusiness recently expanding their organisation into a partnership with a solar energy company to create further business sustainability.

Alkira Organics was established in October 2010 after 2-3 years of discussion between Kelvin Free and Ross Barker about how to best promote and sell organic produce.

The aim was to have a marketing company that sourced produce from its owners and then used the skills of the other owners to effectively market and distribute the produce.

The Free family specialised in growing organic produce, particularly stone fruit.

Ross Barker specialised in marketing and distribution.

They decided to establish a new enterprise, Alkira Organics to grow, market and sell organic fruit.

They now export their produce, supply to major supermarkets and are working with large investors to expand into a large organic international sugar plum market.
